ABOUT ME

As a sophomore Industrial Engineering student at the University of Arkansas, I've continued to develop my skills in collaboration and critical thinking through a variety of hands-on engineering projects. My leadership roles in high school, along with real-world experience in the retail industry, have strengthened my organizational and communication abilities. Now, as I apply these skills in more advanced engineering settings, my passion for Industrial Engineering continues to grow, especially as I see the real-world impact of efficient systems and data-driven decision-making.
